MOTION FOR EARLY PRODUCTION OF JENCKS MATERIAL

COMES NOW the defendant, Stanley Patrick Weber, by and through his attorney, Ryan T. Cox, of the law firm of Springer and Steinberg, P.C., hereby moves this court to order the early production of Jencks material or in the alternative the production of same at the time of trial. The Jencks Act, as it is commonly known, require the government to disclose to defense counsel “any statement ... of the witness in the possession of the United States which related to the subject matter as to which the witness has testified.” 18 U.S.C. § 3500(b).

The defendant submits that waiting until trial to produce these statements will be at best disruptive, but at worst will prevent the defendant from obtaining a fair trial. Instead, requiring the government to provide statements of likely witnesses in the possession of the government in advance of trial will allow the defendant to make a more informed choice in regard to plea negotiations and will allow the defendant to more fully prepare for trial. In the alternative, should the court be unwilling to require the United States to provide these materials early, the defendant hereby moves that the court order the government to provide these materials pursuant to the statute.

Dated this 13th day of April, 2018.

Respectfully Submitted,

/s/ Ryan T. Cox
